

Women Emblames of Sacrifice in the Writings of Tony Morrison

Dr. Suresh P. Agale

Dept. of English, Shri Shivaji Vidya Prasarak Sanstha's Bhausahab N.S. Patil Arts & M.F.M.A. Commerce College,
Dhule-2002, Maharashtra, India

ABSTRACT: Chloe Anthony Wofford Morrison (born Chloe Ardelia Wofford; February 18, 1931 – August 5, 2019), known as Toni Morrison, was an American novelist. Her first novel, The Bluest Eye, was published in 1970. The critically acclaimed Song of Solomon (1977) brought her national attention and won the National Book Critics Circle Award. In 1988, Morrison won the Pulitzer Prize for Beloved (1987); she was awarded the Nobel Prize in Literature in 1993.^[2]

Born and raised in Lorain, Ohio, Morrison graduated from Howard University in 1953 with a B.A. in English. She earned a master's degree in American Literature from Cornell University in 1955. In 1957 she returned to Howard University, was married, and had two children before divorcing in 1964. Morrison became the first black female editor in fiction at Random House in New York City in the late 1960s. She developed her own reputation as an author in the 1970s and '80s. Her work Beloved was made into a film in 1998. Morrison's works are praised for addressing the harsh consequences of racism in the United States and the Black American experience.

The National Endowment for the Humanities selected Morrison for the Jefferson Lecture, the U.S. federal government's highest honor for achievement in the humanities, in 1996. She was honored with the National Book Foundation's Medal of Distinguished Contribution to American Letters the same year. President Barack Obama presented her with the Presidential Medal of Freedom on May 29, 2012. She received the PEN/Saul Bellow Award for Achievement in American Fiction in 2016. Morrison was inducted into the National Women's Hall of Fame in 2020.

KEYWORDS: Tony, Morrison, women, sacrifice, writings

I. INTRODUCTION

Toni Morrison was born Chloe Ardelia Wofford,^[3] the second of four children from a working-class, Black family, in Lorain, Ohio, to Ramah (née Willis) and George Wofford.^[4] Her mother was born in Greenville, Alabama, and moved north with her family as a child. She was a homemaker and a devout member of the African Methodist Episcopal Church.^[5] George Wofford grew up in Cartersville, Georgia. When Wofford was about 15 years old, a group of White people lynched two African-American businessmen who lived on his street. Morrison later said: "He never told us that he'd seen bodies. But he had seen them. And that was too traumatic, I think, for him."^[6] Soon after the lynching, George Wofford moved to the racially integrated town of Lorain, Ohio, in the hope of escaping racism and securing gainful employment in Ohio's burgeoning industrial economy. He worked odd jobs and as a welder for U.S. Steel. Traumatized by his experiences of racism, in a 2015 interview Morrison said her father hated Whites so much he would not let them in the house.^[7]

When Morrison was about two years old, her family's landlord set fire to the house in which they lived, while they were home, because her parents could not afford to pay rent. Her family responded to what she called this "bizarre form of evil" by laughing at the landlord rather than falling into despair. Morrison later said her family's response demonstrated how to keep your integrity and claim your own life in the face of acts of such "monumental crudeness."^[8]

Morrison's parents instilled in her a sense of heritage and language through telling traditional African-American folktales, ghost stories, and singing songs.^{[5][9]} Morrison also read frequently as a child; among her favorite authors were Jane Austen and Leo Tolstoy.^[10]

She became a Catholic at the age of 12^[11] and took the baptismal name Anthony (after Anthony of Padua), which led to her nickname, Toni.^[12]

Attending Lorain High School, she was on the debate team, the yearbook staff, and in the drama club.^[5]

Career

Adulthood, Howard and Cornell years, and editing career: 1949–1975

In 1949, she enrolled at Howard University in Washington, D.C., seeking the company of fellow black intellectuals.^[13] Initially a student in the drama program at Howard, she studied theatre with celebrated drama teachers Anne Cooke Reid and Owen Dodson.^[14] It was while at Howard that she encountered racially segregated restaurants and buses for the first time.^[6] She graduated in 1953 with a B.A. in English and went on to earn a Master of Arts from Cornell University in 1955.^[15] Her master's thesis was titled "Virginia Woolf's and William Faulkner's treatment of the alienated."^[16] She taught English, first at Texas Southern University in Houston from 1955 to 1957, and then at Howard University for the next seven years. While teaching at Howard, she met Harold Morrison, a Jamaican architect, whom she married in 1958. Their first son was born in 1961 and she was pregnant with their second son when she and Harold divorced in 1964.^{[9][17][18]}

After her divorce and the birth of her son Slade in 1965, Morrison began working as an editor for L. W. Singer, a textbook division of publisher Random House,^[5] in Syracuse, New York. Two years later, she transferred to Random House in New York City, where she became their first black woman senior editor in the fiction department.^{[19][20]}

In that capacity, Morrison played a vital role in bringing Black literature into the mainstream. One of the first books she worked on was the groundbreaking Contemporary African Literature (1972), a collection that included work by Nigerian writers Wole Soyinka, Chinua Achebe, and South African playwright Athol Fugard.^[5] She fostered a new generation of Afro-American writers,^[5] including poet and novelist Toni Cade Bambara, radical activist Angela Davis, Black Panther Huey Newton^[21] and novelist Gail Jones, whose writing Morrison discovered. She also brought to publication the 1975 autobiography of the outspoken boxing champion Muhammad Ali, The Greatest: My Own Story. In addition, she published and promoted the work of Henry Dumas,^[22] a little-known novelist and poet who in 1968 had been shot to death by a transit officer in the New York City Subway.^{[6][23]}

Among other books that Morrison developed and edited is The Black Book (1974), an anthology of photographs, illustrations, essays, and documents of Black life in the United States from the time of slavery to the 1920s.^[6] Random House had been uncertain about the project but its publication met with a good reception. Alvin Beam reviewed the anthology for the Cleveland Plain Dealer, writing: "Editors, like novelists, have brain children – books they think up and bring to life without putting their own names on the title page. Mrs. Morrison has one of these in the stores now, and magazines and newsletters in the publishing trade are ecstatic, saying it will go like hotcakes."^[5]

First writings and teaching, 1970–1986

Morrison had begun writing fiction as part of an informal group of poets and writers at Howard University who met to discuss their work. She attended one meeting with a short story about a Black girl who longed to have blue eyes. Morrison later developed the story as her first novel, The Bluest Eye, getting up every morning at 4 am to write, while raising two children on her own.^[17]

Morrison's portrait on the first-edition dust jacket of The Bluest Eye (1970)

The Bluest Eye was published by Holt, Rinehart, and Winston in 1970, when Morrison was aged 39.^[20] It was favorably reviewed in The New York Times by John Leonard, who praised Morrison's writing style as being "a prose so precise, so faithful to speech and so charged with pain and wonder that the novel becomes poetry ... But The Bluest

Eye is also history, sociology, folklore, nightmare and music."^[24] The novel did not sell well at first, but the City University of New York put The Bluest Eye on its reading list for its new Black studies department, as did other colleges, which boosted sales.^[25] The book also brought Morrison to the attention of the acclaimed editor Robert Gottlieb at Knopf, an imprint of the publisher Random House. Gottlieb later edited most of Morrison's novels.^[25]

In 1975, Morrison's second novel Sula (1973), about a friendship between two Black women, was nominated for the National Book Award. Her third novel, Song of Solomon (1977), follows the life of Macon "Milkman" Dead III, from birth to adulthood, as he discovers his heritage. This novel brought her national acclaim, being a main selection of the Book of the Month Club, the first novel by a Black writer to be so chosen since Richard Wright's Native Son in 1940.^[26] Song of Solomon also won the National Book Critics Circle Award.^[27]

At its 1979 commencement ceremonies, Barnard College awarded Morrison its highest honor, the Barnard Medal of Distinction.^[28]

Morrison gave her next novel, Tar Baby (1981), a contemporary setting. In it, a looks-obsessed fashion model, Jadine, falls in love with Son, a penniless drifter who feels at ease with being Black.^[17]

In 1983, Morrison left publishing to devote more time to writing, while living in a converted boathouse on the Hudson River in Nyack, New York.^{[29][30]} She taught English at two branches of the State University of New York (SUNY) and at Rutgers University's New Brunswick campus.^[31] In 1984, she was appointed to an Albert Schweitzer chair at the University at Albany, SUNY.^[32]

Morrison's first play, Dreaming Emmett, is about the 1955 murder by white men of Black teenager Emmett Till. The play was commissioned by the New York State Writers Institute at the State University of New York at Albany, where she was teaching at the time. It was produced in 1986 by Capital Repertory Theatre and directed by Gilbert Moses.^[33] Morrison was also a visiting professor at Bard College from 1986 to 1988.^[34]

The Beloved Trilogy and the Nobel Prize: 1987–1998

Morrison, with her sons Ford (left) and Slade (right) at their upstate New York home, between 1980 and 1987

In 1987, Morrison published her most celebrated novel, Beloved. It was inspired by the true story of an enslaved African-American woman, Margaret Garner,^[35] whose story Morrison had discovered when compiling The Black Book. Garner had escaped slavery but was pursued by slave hunters. Facing a return to slavery, Garner killed her two-year-old daughter but was captured before she could kill herself.^[36] Morrison's novel imagines the dead baby returning as a ghost, Beloved, to haunt her mother and family.^[37]

Beloved was a critical success and a bestseller for 25 weeks. The New York Times book reviewer Michiko Kakutani wrote that the scene of the mother killing her baby is "so brutal and disturbing that it appears to warp time before and after into a single unwavering line of fate."^[38] Canadian writer Margaret Atwood wrote in a review for The New York Times, "Ms. Morrison's versatility and technical and emotional range appear to know no bounds. If there were any doubts about her stature as a pre-eminent American novelist, of her own or any other generation, Beloved will put them to rest."^[39]

Not all critics praised Beloved, however. African-American conservative social critic Stanley Crouch, for instance, complained in his review in The New Republic^[40] that the novel "reads largely like a melodrama lashed to the structural conceits of the miniseries," and that Morrison "perpetually interrupts her narrative with maudlin ideological commercials."^{[41][42]}

Despite overall high acclaim, Beloved failed to win the prestigious National Book Award or the National Book Critics Circle Award. Forty-eight Black critics and writers,^{[43][44]} among them Maya Angelou, protested the omission in a statement that The New York Times published on January 24, 1988.^{[20][45][46]} "Despite the international stature of Toni Morrison, she has yet to receive the national recognition that her five major works of fiction entirely deserve," they wrote.^[6] Two months later, Beloved won the Pulitzer Prize for Fiction.^[38] It also won an Anisfield-Wolf Book Award.^[47]

Beloved is the first of three novels about love and African-American history, sometimes called the Beloved Trilogy.^[48] Morrison said that they are intended to be read together, explaining, "The conceptual connection is the search for the beloved – the part of the self that is you, and loves you, and is always there for you."^[8] The second novel in the trilogy, Jazz, came out in 1992. Told in language that imitates the rhythms of jazz music, the novel is about a love triangle during the Harlem Renaissance in New York City. That year she also published her first book of literary criticism, Playing in the Dark: Whiteness and the Literary Imagination (1992), an examination of the African-American presence in White American literature.^[47] (In 2016, Time magazine noted that Playing in the Dark was among Morrison's most-assigned texts on U.S. college campuses, together with several of her novels and her 1993 Nobel Prize lecture.)^[49] According to Lyn Innes: "Morrison sought to change not just the content and audience for her fiction; her desire was to create stories which could be lingered over and relished, not 'consumed and gobbled as fast food', and at the same time to ensure that these stories and their characters had a strong historical and cultural base."^[50]

Before the third novel of the Beloved Trilogy was published, Morrison was awarded the Nobel Prize in Literature in 1993. The citation praised her as an author "who in novels characterized by visionary force and poetic import, gives life to an essential aspect of American reality."^[51] She was the first Black woman of any nationality to win the prize.^[52] In her acceptance speech, Morrison said: "We die. That may be the meaning of life. But we do language. That may be the measure of our lives."^[53]

In her Nobel lecture, Morrison talked about the power of storytelling. To make her point, she told a story. She spoke about a blind, old, Black woman who is approached by a group of young people. They demand of her, "Is there no context for our lives? No song, no literature, no poem full of vitamins, no history connected to experience that you can pass along to help us start strong? ... Think of our lives and tell us your particularized world. Make up a story."^[54]

In 1996, the National Endowment for the Humanities selected Morrison for the Jefferson Lecture, the U.S. federal government's highest honor for "distinguished intellectual achievement in the humanities."^[55] Morrison's lecture, entitled "The Future of Time: Literature and Diminished Expectations,"^[56] began with the aphorism: "Time, it seems, has no future." She cautioned against the misuse of history to diminish expectations of the future.^[57] Morrison was also honored with the 1996 National Book Foundation's Medal of Distinguished Contribution to American Letters, which is awarded to a writer "who has enriched our literary heritage over a life of service, or a corpus of work."^[58]

The third novel of her Beloved Trilogy, Paradise, about citizens of an all-Black town, came out in 1997. The following year, Morrison was on the cover of Time magazine, making her only the second female writer of fiction and second Black writer of fiction to appear on what was perhaps the most significant U.S. magazine cover of the era.^[59]

Beloved onscreen and "the Oprah effect"

Also in 1998, the movie adaptation of Beloved was released, directed by Jonathan Demme and co-produced by Oprah Winfrey, who had spent ten years bringing it to the screen. Winfrey also stars as the main character, Sethe, alongside Danny Glover as Sethe's lover, Paul D, and Thandiwe Newton as Beloved.^[60]

The movie flopped at the box office. A review in The Economist suggested that "most audiences are not eager to endure nearly three hours of a cerebral film with an original storyline featuring supernatural themes, murder, rape, and slavery."^[61] Film critic Janet Maslin, however, in her New York Times review "No Peace from a Brutal Legacy" called it a "transfixing, deeply felt adaptation of Toni Morrison's novel. ... Its linchpin is of course Oprah Winfrey, who had the clout and foresight to bring 'Beloved' to the screen and has the dramatic presence to hold it together."^[62] Film critic Roger Ebert suggested that Beloved was not a genre ghost story but the supernatural was used to explore deeper issues and the non-linear structure of Morrison's story had a purpose.^[60]

In 1996, television talk-show host Oprah Winfrey selected Song of Solomon for her newly launched Book Club, which became a popular feature on her Oprah Winfrey Show.^[63] An average of 13 million viewers watched the show's book club segments.^[64] As a result, when Winfrey selected Morrison's earliest novel The Bluest Eye in 2000, it sold another 800,000 paperback copies.^[5] John Young wrote in the African American Review in 2001 that Morrison's career experienced the boost of "The Oprah Effect, ... enabling Morrison to reach a broad, popular audience."^[65]

Winfrey selected a total of four of Morrison's novels over six years, giving Morrison's novels a bigger sales boost than they got from her Nobel Prize win in 1993.^[66] The novelist also appeared three times on Winfrey's show. Winfrey said, "For all those who asked the question 'Toni Morrison again?'... I say with certainty there would have been no Oprah's

Book Club if this woman had not chosen to share her love of words with the world."^[64] Morrison called the book club a "reading revolution".^[64]

II. DISCUSSION

The early 21st century

Morrison continued to explore different art forms, such as providing texts for original scores of classical music. She collaborated with André Previn on the song cycle Honey and Rue, which premiered with Kathleen Battle in January 1992, and on Four Songs, premiered at Carnegie Hall with Sylvia McNair in November 1994. Both Sweet Talk: Four Songs on Text and Spirits In the Well (1997) were written for Jessye Norman with music by Richard Danielpour, and, alongside Maya Angelou and Clarissa Pinkola Estés, Morrison provided the text for composer Judith Weir's woman.life.song commissioned by Carnegie Hall for Jessye Norman, which premiered in April 2000.^{[67][68]}

Morrison returned to Margaret Garner's life story, the basis of her novel Beloved, to write the libretto for a new opera, Margaret Garner. Completed in 2002, with music by Richard Danielpour, the opera was premiered on May 7, 2005, at the Detroit Opera House with Denyce Graves in the title role.^[69]

Love, Morrison's first novel since Paradise, came out in 2003. In 2004, she put together a children's book called Remember to mark the 50th anniversary of the Brown v. Board of Education Supreme Court decision in 1954 that declared racially segregated public schools to be unconstitutional.^[70]

From 1997 to 2003, Morrison was an Andrew D. White Professor-at-Large at Cornell University.^[71]

In June 2005, the University of Oxford awarded Morrison an honorary Doctor of Letters degree.^[72]

In the spring 2006, The New York Times Book Review named Beloved the best work of American fiction published in the previous 25 years, as chosen by a selection of prominent writers, literary critics, and editors.^[73] In his essay about the choice, "In Search of the Best," critic A. O. Scott said: "Any other outcome would have been startling since Morrison's novel has inserted itself into the American canon more completely than any of its potential rivals. With remarkable speed, 'Beloved' has, less than 20 years after its publication, become a staple of the college literary curriculum, which is to say a classic. This triumph is commensurate with its ambition since it was Morrison's intention in writing it precisely to expand the range of classic American literature, to enter, as a living Black woman, the company of dead White males like Faulkner, Melville, Hawthorne and Twain."^[74]

In November 2006, Morrison visited the Louvre museum in Paris as the second in its "Grand Invité" program to guest-curate a month-long series of events across the arts on the theme of "The Foreigner's Home", about which The New York Times said: "In tapping her own African-American culture, Ms. Morrison is eager to credit 'foreigners' with enriching the countries where they settle."^{[75][76][77]}

Morrison's novel A Mercy, released in 2008, is set in the Virginia colonies of 1682. Diane Johnson, in her review in Vanity Fair, called A Mercy "a poetic, visionary, mesmerizing tale that captures, in the cradle of our present problems and strains, the natal curse put on us back then by the Indian tribes, Africans, Dutch, Portuguese, and English competing to get their footing in the New World against a hostile landscape and the essentially tragic nature of human experience."^[78]

Princeton years

From 1989 until her retirement in 2006, Morrison held the Robert F. Goheen Chair in the Humanities at Princeton University.^[10] She said she did not think much of modern fiction writers who reference their own lives instead of inventing new material, and she used to tell her creative writing students, "I don't want to hear about your little life, OK?" Similarly, she chose not to write about her own life in a memoir or autobiography.^[13]

Though based in the Creative Writing Program at Princeton, Morrison did not regularly offer writing workshops to students after the late 1990s, a fact that earned her some criticism. Rather, she conceived and developed the Princeton Atelier, a program that brings together students with writers and performing artists. Together the students and the artists produce works of art that are presented to the public after a semester of collaboration.^[79]

Morrison speaking in 2008

Inspired by her curatorship at the Louvre Museum, Morrison returned to Princeton in the fall 2008 to lead a small seminar, also entitled "The Foreigner's Home".^[19]

On November 17, 2017, Princeton University dedicated Morrison Hall (a building previously called West College) in her honor.^[80]

Final years: 2010–2019

In May 2010, Morrison appeared at PEN World Voices for a conversation with Marlene van Niekerk and Kwame Anthony Appiah about South African literature and specifically van Niekerk's 2004 novel Agaat.^[81]

Morrison wrote books for children with her younger son, Slade Morrison, who was a painter and a musician. Slade died of pancreatic cancer on December 22, 2010, aged 45,^{[25][82]} when Morrison's novel Home (2012) was half-completed.^[25]

In May 2011, Morrison received an Honorary Doctor of Letters degree from Rutgers University–New Brunswick. During the commencement ceremony,^[83] she delivered a speech on the "pursuit of life, liberty, meaningfulness, integrity, and truth."

Morrison in 2013

In 2011, Morrison worked with opera director Peter Sellars and Malian singer-songwriter Rokia Traoré on Desdemona, taking a fresh look at William Shakespeare's tragedy Othello. The trio focused on the relationship between Othello's wife Desdemona and her African nursemaid, Barbary, who is only briefly referenced in Shakespeare. The play, a mix of words, music and song, premiered in Vienna in 2011.^{[19][13][84]}

Morrison had stopped working on her latest novel when her son died in 2010, later explaining, "I stopped writing until I began to think, He would be really put out if he thought that he had caused me to stop. 'Please, Mom, I'm dead, could you keep going ...?'"^[85]

She completed Home and dedicated it to her son Slade.^{[12][86][87]} Published in 2012, it is the story of a Korean War veteran in the segregated United States of the 1950s who tries to save his sister from brutal medical experiments at the hands of a white doctor.^[85]

In August 2012, Oberlin College became the home base of the Toni Morrison Society,^[88] an international literary society founded in 1993, dedicated to scholarly research of Morrison's work.^{[89][90][91]}

Morrison's eleventh novel, God Help the Child, was published in 2015. It follows Bride, an executive in the fashion and beauty industry whose mother tormented her as a child for being dark-skinned, a trauma that has continued to dog Bride.^[92]

Morrison was a member of the editorial advisory board of The Nation, a magazine started in 1865 by Northern abolitionists.^{[93][70]}

Personal life

While teaching at Howard University from 1957 to 1964, she met Harold Morrison, a Jamaican architect, whom she married in 1958. She took his last name and became known as Toni Morrison. Their first son, Harold Ford, was born in 1961. She was pregnant when she and Harold divorced in 1964.^{[9][17][18]} Her second son, Slade Kevin, was born in 1965.

Morrison began working as an editor for L.W. Singer Company, a textbook division of Random House^[5] in Syracuse, New York. She moved with her sons as her career took her to different positions in different places.

Her son Slade Morrison died of pancreatic cancer on December 22, 2010,^{[25][94]} when Morrison was halfway through writing her novel Home. She stopped work on the novel for a year or two before completing it; that novel was published in 2012.

Death and memorial

Morrison died at Montefiore Medical Center in The Bronx, New York City, on August 5, 2019, from complications of pneumonia. She was 88 years old.^{[95][96][97]}

A memorial tribute was held for Morrison on November 21, 2019, at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in the Morningside Heights neighborhood of Manhattan in New York City. At this gathering she was eulogized by, among others, Oprah Winfrey, Angela Davis, Michael Ondaatje, David Remnick, Fran Lebowitz, Ta-Nehisi Coates, and Edwidge Danticat.^[98] The jazz saxophonist David Murray performed a musical tribute.^[99]

Politics, literary reception, and legacy

Politics

Street art depicting Morrison in Vitoria, Spain

Morrison spoke openly about American politics and race relations.

In writing about the 1998 impeachment of Bill Clinton, she claimed that since Whitewater, Bill Clinton was being mistreated in the same way Black people often are:

Years ago, in the middle of the Whitewater investigation, one heard the first murmurs: white skin notwithstanding, this is our first black President. Blacker than any actual black person who could ever be elected in our children's lifetime. After all, Clinton displays almost every trope of blackness: single-parent household, born poor, working-class, saxophone-playing, McDonald's-and-junk-food-loving boy from Arkansas.^[100]

The phrase "our first Black president" was adopted as a positive by Bill Clinton supporters. When the Congressional Black Caucus honored the former president at its dinner in Washington, D.C., on September 29, 2001, for instance, Rep. Eddie Bernice Johnson (D-TX), the chair, told the audience that Clinton "took so many initiatives he made us think for a while we had elected the first black president."^[101]

In the context of the 2008 Democratic Primary campaign, Morrison stated to Time magazine: "People misunderstood that phrase. I was deploring the way in which President Clinton was being treated, vis-à-vis the sex scandal that was surrounding him. I said he was being treated like a black on the street, already guilty, already a perp. I have no idea what his real instincts are, in terms of race."^[102] In the Democratic primary contest for the 2008 presidential race, Morrison endorsed Senator Barack Obama over Senator Hillary Clinton,^[103] though expressing admiration and respect for the latter.^[104] When he won, Morrison said she felt like an American for the first time. She said, "I felt very powerfully patriotic when I went to the inauguration of Barack Obama. I felt like a kid."^[12]

In April 2015, speaking of the deaths of Michael Brown, Eric Garner and Walter Scott – three unarmed Black men killed by white police officers – Morrison said: "People keep saying, 'We need to have a conversation about race.' This is the conversation. I want to see a cop shoot a white unarmed teenager in the back. And I want to see a white man convicted for raping a Black woman. Then when you ask me, 'Is it over?', I will say yes."^[105]

After the 2016 election of Donald Trump as President of the United States, Morrison wrote an essay, "Mourning for Whiteness," published in the November 21, 2016 issue of The New Yorker. In it she argues that white Americans are so afraid of losing privileges afforded them by their race that white voters elected Trump, whom she described as being "endorsed by the Ku Klux Klan", in order to keep the idea of white supremacy alive.^{[106][107]}

Relationship to feminism

Although her novels typically concentrate on black women, Morrison did not identify her works as feminist. When asked in a 1998 interview, "Why distance oneself from feminism?" she replied: "In order to be as free as I possibly can, in my own imagination, I can't take positions that are closed. Everything I've ever done, in the writing world, has been to expand articulation, rather than to close it, to open doors, sometimes, not even closing the book – leaving the endings open for reinterpretation, revisitation, a little ambiguity."^[108] She went on to state that she thought it "off-putting to some readers, who may feel that I'm involved in writing some kind of feminist tract. I don't subscribe to patriarchy, and I don't think it should be substituted with matriarchy. I think it's a question of equitable access, and opening doors to all sorts of things."^[108]

In 2012, she responded to a question about the difference between black and white feminists in the 1970s. "Womanists is what black feminists used to call themselves," she explained. "They were not the same thing. And also the relationship with men. Historically, black women have always sheltered their men because they were out there, and they were the ones that were most likely to be killed."^[85]

W. S. Kottiswari writes in Postmodern Feminist Writers (2008) that Morrison exemplifies characteristics of "postmodern feminism" by "altering Euro-American dichotomies by rewriting a history written by mainstream historians" and by her usage of shifting narration in Beloved and Paradise. Kottiswari states: "Instead of western logocentric abstractions, Morrison prefers the powerful vivid language of women of color ... She is essentially postmodern since her approach to myth and folklore is re-visionist."^[109]

III. RESULTS

National Memorial for Peace and Justice

A quote from Morrison at the National Memorial for Peace and Justice in Montgomery, Alabama

The National Memorial for Peace and Justice in Montgomery, Alabama, includes writing by Morrison.^[110] Visitors can see her quote after they have walked through the section commemorating individual victims of lynching.^[111]

Papers

The Toni Morrison Papers are part of the permanent library collections of Princeton University, where they are held in the Manuscripts Division, Department of Rare Books and Special Collections.^{[112][113]} Morrison's decision to offer her papers to Princeton instead of to her alma mater Howard University was criticized by some within the historically black colleges and universities community.^[114]

Documentary films

Morrison was interviewed by Margaret Busby in London for a 1988 documentary film by Sindamani Bridglal, entitled Identifiable Qualities, shown on Channel 4.^{[115][116]}

Morrison was the subject of a film titled Imagine – Toni Morrison Remembers, directed by Jill Nicholls and shown on BBC One television on July 15, 2015, in which Morrison talked to Alan Yentob about her life and work.^{[117][118][119]}

In 2016, Oberlin College received a grant to complete a documentary film begun in 2014, The Foreigner's Home, about Morrison's intellectual and artistic vision,^[120] explored in the context of the 2006 exhibition she guest-curated at the Louvre.^{[121][122]} The film's executive producer was Jonathan Demme.^[123] It was directed by Oberlin College Cinema Studies faculty Geoff Pingree and Rian Brown,^[124] and incorporates footage shot by Morrison's first-born son Harold Ford Morrison, who also consulted on the film.^[125]

In 2019, Timothy Greenfield-Sanders' documentary Toni Morrison: The Pieces I Am premiered at the Sundance Film Festival.^[126] People featured in the film include Morrison, Angela Davis, Oprah Winfrey, Sonia Sanchez, and Walter Mosley, among others.^[127]

IV. CONCLUSIONS

Besides various awards and nominations-other tributes and honors

Morrison Dining

In 2019, a resolution was passed in her hometown of Lorain, Ohio, to designate February 18, her birthday, as Toni Morrison Day. Additional legislation was introduced to also proclaim that date as "Toni Morrison Day" throughout the State of Ohio.^{[182][183][184]} The legislation, HB 325, was passed by the Ohio House of Representatives on December 2, 2020,^[185] and signed into law by Governor Mike DeWine on December 21, 2020.^[186]

In 2020/2019, Cornell University opened Toni Morrison Hall, a 178,869 square-foot residence hall and Morrison Dining, an adjacent dining hall designed by ikon.5 Architects.^{[187][188]}

REFERENCES

1. "Toni Morrison Fast Facts". CNN. August 8, 2019. Retrieved August 8, 2019.
2. ^ Desk, OV Digital (February 17, 2018). "18 February: Remembering Toni Morrison on Birth Anniversary". Observer Voice. Retrieved March 10, 2018.
3. ^ Duvall, John N. (2000). The Identifying Fictions of Toni Morrison: Modernist Authenticity and Postmodern Blackness. Palgrave Macmillan. p. 38. ISBN 978-0312234027. After all the published biographical information on Morrison agrees that her full name is Chloe Anthony Wofford, so that the adoption of 'Toni' as a substitute for 'Chloe' still honors her given name, if somewhat obliquely. Morrison's middle name, however, was not Anthony; her birth certificate indicates her full name as Chloe Ardelia Wofford, which reveals that Ramah and George Wofford named their daughter for her maternal grandmother, Ardelia Willis.
4. ^ Dreifus, Claudia (September 11, 1994). "Chloe Wofford Talks About Toni Morrison". The New York Times. Archived from the original on January 15, 2005. Retrieved June 11, 2007. Alt URL
5. ^ a b c d e f g h i Als, Hilton (October 27, 2003). "Ghosts in the House: How Toni Morrison Fostered a Generation of Black Writers". The New Yorker. Retrieved May 1, 2017.
6. ^ a b c d e Ghansah, Rachel Kaadzi (April 8, 2015). "The Radical Vision of Toni Morrison". The New York Times. Retrieved April 29, 2017.
7. ^ "Toni Morrison Remembers". BBC. Summer 2015. Retrieved January 24, 2020.

8. ^{a b} Streitfeld, David (October 8, 1993). "The Laureates's Life Song". The Washington Post. Retrieved April 29, 2017.
9. ^{a b c} Mote, Dave, ed. (1997). "Toni Morrison". Contemporary Popular Writers. Detroit: St. James Press. ISBN 978-1558622166.
10. ^{a b} Larson, Susan (April 11, 2007). "Awaiting Toni Morrison". The Times-Picayune. Archived from the original on September 30, 2007. Retrieved June 11, 2007.
11. ^a Ripatrazone, Nick (March 2, 2020). "On the Paradoxes of Toni Morrison's Catholicism". Lithub.com. Retrieved February 28, 2019.
12. ^{a b c} Brockes, Emma (April 13, 2012). "Toni Morrison: 'I want to feel what I feel. Even if it's not happiness'". The Guardian. Retrieved February 14, 2013.
13. ^{a b c} Cummings, Pip (August 7, 2015). "'I didn't want to come back': Toni Morrison on life, death and Desdemona". The Sydney Morning Herald. Retrieved May 3, 2017.
14. ^a Dana A. Williams (August 12, 2014). "To Make A Humanist Black: Toni Wofford's Howard Years". In Adrienne Lanier Seward, Justine Tally (ed.). Toni Morrison: Memory and Meaning. University Press of Mississippi. ISBN 9781626742048.
15. ^a Wilensky, Joe (August 6, 2019). "Literary icon Toni Morrison, M.A. '55, dies at 88". Cornell Chronicle. Retrieved December 13, 2019.
16. ^a Wofford, Chloe Ardellia (September 1955). Virginia Woolf's and William Faulkner's Treatment of the Alienated. Cornell University. Retrieved March 5, 2016.
17. ^{a b c d} Hoby, Hermione (April 25, 2015). "Toni Morrison: 'I'm writing for black people ... I don't have to apologize'". The Guardian. Retrieved April 29, 2017.
18. ^{a b} Gillespie, Carmen (2007). Critical Companion to Toni Morrison: A Literary Reference to Her Life and Work. Infobase Publishing. p. 6. ISBN 978-1438108575.
19. ^{a b c} "Toni Morrison Biography", Bio.com, April 2, 2014. Retrieved October 31, 2015.
20. ^{a b c} Grimes, William (October 8, 1993). "Toni Morrison Is '93 Winner of Nobel Prize in Literature". The New York Times. Retrieved June 11, 2007.
21. ^a "Nobel Prize-winning author Toni Morrison dies at 88". ABC News. August 7, 2019. Retrieved August 7, 2019.
22. ^a Morrison, Toni (Summer 1988). "On behalf of Henry Dumas". Black American Literature Forum. 22 (2): 310–312. doi:10.2307/2904523. ISSN 0148-6179. JSTOR 2904523.
23. ^a Verdelle, A. J. (February 1998). "Paradise found: a talk with Toni Morrison about her new novel – Nobel Laureate's new book, 'Paradise' – Interview". Essence. Archived from the original on August 11, 2013. Retrieved June 11, 2007.
24. ^a Leonard, John (November 13, 1970). "Books of The Times". The New York Times. Archived from the original on August 9, 2019. Retrieved August 12, 2019.
25. ^{a b c d e} Kachka, Boris (April 27, 2012). "Who Is the Author of Toni Morrison?". New York. Retrieved August 7, 2019.
26. ^a Busby, Margaret (October 9, 1993), "Books: Toni Morrison: beloved and all that jazz ..." Archived April 22, 2019, at the Wayback Machine, The Independent.
27. ^a "All Past National Book Critics Circle Award Winners and Finalists". bookcritics.org. National Book Critics Circle. Archived from the original on October 6, 2019. Retrieved August 6, 2019.
28. ^a Greenwell, Megan (May 18, 2005). "Quindlen Tells Grads to Lead, Be Fearless". Columbia Daily Spectator. Columbia University Libraries. Retrieved August 6, 2019.
29. ^a "New York Home of Toni Morrison Burns". The New York Times. December 26, 1993. p. 38. Retrieved August 6, 2019.
30. ^a Jaggi, Maya (November 14, 2003). "Solving the riddle". The Guardian. Retrieved August 7, 2019.
31. ^a Westenfeld, Adrienne (August 6, 2019). "Toni Morrison's Monumental Impact on Literature and Culture Will Be Felt For Centuries to Come". Esquire. Retrieved August 6, 2019.
32. ^a Henry, David (August 6, 2019). "Toni Morrison, First Black Woman Writer to Win Nobel, Dies". Bloomberg. Retrieved August 6, 2019.
33. ^{a b} Croyden, Margaret (December 29, 1985). "Toni Morrison Tries Her Hand at Playwriting". The New York Times. Retrieved May 1, 2017.
34. ^a Fultz 2003, p. xii.

35. ^ Rothstein, Mervyn (August 26, 1987). "Toni Morrison, In Her New Novel, Defends Women". The New York Times. Retrieved June 20, 2016.
36. ^ "Margaret Garner Incident (1856)". Black Past. December 5, 2007. Retrieved April 29, 2017.
37. ^ Mathieson, Barbara Offutt (1990). "Memory and Mother Love in Morrison's 'Beloved'". American Imago. 47 (1): 1–21. ISSN 0065-860X. JSTOR 26303963.
38. ^ a b c Hevesi, Dennis (April 1, 1988). "Toni Morrison's Novel 'Beloved' Wins the Pulitzer Prize in Fiction". The New York Times. Retrieved April 29, 2017.
39. ^ Atwood, Margaret (September 13, 1987). "Jaunted By Their Nightmares". The New York Times. Retrieved May 1, 2017.
40. ^ Crouch, Stanley (October 19, 1987). "Literary Conjure Woman". The New Republic. Retrieved May 8, 2017.
41. ^ Alexander, Amy (January 19, 1999). "The bull in the black-intelligentsia china shop". Salon. Retrieved May 8, 2017.
42. ^ Gioia, Ted. "Beloved by Toni Morrison". thenewcanon.com. Retrieved May 8, 2017.
43. ^ McDowell, Edwin (January 19, 1988). "48 Black Writers Protest By Praising Morrison". The New York Times. Retrieved August 9, 2019.
44. ^ "'Writers Demand Recognition for Toni Morrison (1988)', June Jordan Houston A. Baker Jr. Statement". July 27, 2012 – via AALBC.com's Discussion Boards.
45. ^ "Black Writers in Praise of Toni Morrison". Book Review. The New York Times. April 8, 2018. Retrieved August 8, 2019.
46. ^ Menand, Louis (December 26, 2005). "All That Glitters – Literature's global economy". The New Yorker. Retrieved June 11, 2007.
47. ^ a b "Beloved". Anisfield-Wolf Book Awards. Retrieved April 29, 2017.
48. ^ "Toni Morrison Trilogy by Toni Morrison". goodreads.com. Retrieved April 29, 2017.
49. ^ Johnson, David (February 25, 2016). "These Are the 100 Most-Read Female Writers in College Classes". Time.
50. ^ Innes, Lyn (August 6, 2019). "Toni Morrison obituary". The Guardian.
51. ^ "Toni Morrison – Facts". nobelprize.org. Retrieved April 29, 2017.
52. ^ Brockell, Gillian (August 6, 2019). "Toni Morrison, the Nobel Prize, a terrifying staircase and the king who rescued her". The Washington Post. Retrieved August 6, 2019.
53. ^ Colman, Michelle Sinclair (October 30, 2020). "Toni Morrison's Personal Library Is Now Available to Purchase". Galerie. Retrieved November 16, 2020.
54. ^ "Toni Morrison – Nobel Lecture". nobelprize.org. December 7, 1993. Retrieved April 29, 2017.
55. ^ Jefferson Lecturers Archived October 20, 2011, at the Wayback Machine at NEH Website. Retrieved January 22, 2009.
56. ^ Morrison, Toni, "The Future of Time, Literature and Diminished Expectations," reprinted in Toni Morrison, What Moves at the Margin: Selected Nonfiction (University Press of Mississippi, 2008), ISBN 978-1604730173, pp. 170–186.
57. ^ Hawkins, B. Denise, "Marvelous Morrison – Toni Morrison – Award-Winning Author Talks About the Future From Some Place in Time", Archived May 12, 2012, at the Wayback Machine Diverse Online (formerly Black Issues in Higher Education), June 17, 2007.
58. ^ "National Book Foundation's Medal for Distinguished Contribution to American Letters, Presenter of National Book Awards". Nationalbook.org. Retrieved May 30, 2012.
59. ^ Corman, Josh (August 14, 2013). "A Brief History of (Novelists on the Cover of) Time". Book Riot. Retrieved April 29, 2017.
60. ^ a b Ebert, Roger (October 16, 1998). "Beloved Movie Review & Film Summary (1998)". www.rogerebert.com. Retrieved April 29, 2017.
61. ^ "Beloved it's not". The Economist. November 19, 1998. ISSN 0013-0613. Retrieved May 2, 2017.
62. ^ Maslin, Janet (October 16, 1998). "Film Review; No Peace From A Brutal Legacy". The New York Times. Retrieved May 2, 2017.
63. ^ "The Bluest Eye at Oprah's Book Club official page". Oprah.com.
64. ^ a b c Lister, Rachel (2009). "Toni Morrison and the Media". Reading Toni Morrison. ABC-CLIO. p. 113. ISBN 978-0313354991.

65. ^ Young, John K. (January 1, 2001). "Toni Morrison, Oprah Winfrey, and Postmodern Popular Audiences". African American Review. 35 (2): 181–204. doi:10.2307/2903252. JSTOR 2903252.
66. ^ Berg, Madeline (August 3, 2016). "With New Book Club Pick, Oprah's Still Got The Golden Touch". Forbes. Retrieved May 2, 2017.
67. ^ Hinkley, Anna (September 8, 2020). "Toni Morrison in Classical Music". Classical Music Indy. Retrieved February 12, 2020.
68. ^ "Honor! A Celebration of the African American Cultural Legacy – Festival Artists – Toni Morrison". honor.carnegiehall.org. March 2009. Retrieved August 6, 2019.
69. ^ "Rising Opera Star Angela M. Brown to replace Jessye Norman in World Premiere Production of Margaret Garner", Michigan Opera Theater, April 1, 2005. Archived October 29, 2014, at the Wayback Machine.
70. ^ a b "'We Better Do Something': Toni Morrison and Cornel West in Conversation". The Nation. May 6, 2004. ISSN 0027-8378. Retrieved April 7, 2018.
71. ^ "All Professors at Large 1965 to June 30, 2018". Cornell University. Retrieved June 8, 2018.
72. ^ Morrison, Toni (2008). Toni Morrison: Conversations. University Press of Mississippi. p. xxiii. ISBN 978-1604730197.
73. ^ "What Is the Best Work of American Fiction of the Last 25 Years?". The New York Times. May 21, 2006. Retrieved May 1, 2017.
74. ^ Scott, A. O. (May 21, 2006). "In Search of the Best". The New York Times. Retrieved May 1, 2017.
75. ^ "Toni Morrison puts slam poetry in Louvre". The Denver Post. Associated Press. November 8, 2006.
76. ^ Riding, Alan (November 21, 2006). "Rap and Film at the Louvre? What's Up With That?". The New York Times.
77. ^ "Toni Morrison on Looking for 'Wordless Forms' at the Louvre, in 2006: From the Archives". ARTnews. August 8, 2019. Retrieved February 12, 2020.
78. ^ Johnson, Diane (December 2008). "Voice of America". Vanity Fair. Retrieved May 1, 2017.
79. ^ Gillespie, Carmen (2007). Critical Companion to Toni Morrison: A Literary Reference to Her Life and Work. Infobase Publishing. p. 377. ISBN 978-1438108575.
80. ^ Dienst, Karin (November 20, 2017). "Princeton dedicates Morrison Hall in honor of Nobel laureate and emeritus faculty member Toni Morrison". Princeton University.
81. ^ "Toni Morrison and Marlene van Niekerk in Conversation with Anthony Appiah". PEN World Voices Festival. May 1, 2010. Archived from the original on October 5, 2012.
82. ^ Claudette. "About the Artist". SladeMorrison.com. Archived from the original on April 30, 2011. Retrieved May 14, 2011.
83. ^ "Nobel Laureate Toni Morrison to Speak, Receive Honorary Degree at Rutgers' 245th Commencement May 15". Rutgers Today. February 8, 2011.
84. ^ Sciolino, Elaine (October 25, 2011). "Toni Morrison's 'Desdemona' and Peter Sellars's 'Othello'". The New York Times. Retrieved May 3, 2017.
85. ^ a b c Bollen, Christopher (May 1, 2012). "Toni Morrison's Haunting Resonance". Interview. Retrieved April 29, 2017.
86. ^ Minzesheimer, Bob (May 7, 2012), "New novel 'Home' brings Toni Morrison back to Ohio", USA Today.
87. ^ Mitra, Ipshita (May 14, 2014), "Toni Morrison builds a 'Home' we never knew", The Times of India.
88. ^ "Society History", The Toni Morrison Society.
89. ^ "Oberlin College Establishes Partnership with Toni Morrison Society". Oberlin College. July 29, 2016. Retrieved May 2, 2017.
90. ^ Communications Staff (September 18, 2013), "Toni Morrison Society Celebrates 20 Years", Oberlin College.
91. ^ "Morrison Society Office Dedicated", Library Perspectives (newsletter of the Oberlin College Library), Fall 2013, Issue No. 49, p. 5.
92. ^ Gay, Roxane (April 29, 2015). "God Help the Child by Toni Morrison review – 'incredibly powerful'". The Guardian. Retrieved April 29, 2017.
93. ^ "Toni Morrison". The Nation. April 2, 2010. Retrieved April 29, 2017.
94. ^ Claudette. "About the Artist". SladeMorrison.com. Archived from the original on April 30, 2011. Retrieved May 14, 2011.
95. ^ a b Fox, Margalit (August 6, 2019). "Toni Morrison, Towering Novelist of the Black Experience, Dies at 88". The New York Times. Retrieved August 6, 2019.

96. ^ Italie, Hillel (August 6, 2019). "Nobel laureate Toni Morrison dead at 88". AP NEWS. Retrieved August 6, 2019.
97. ^ Lea, Richard; Cain, Sian (August 6, 2019). "Toni Morrison, author and Nobel laureate, dies aged 88". The Guardian. Retrieved August 6, 2019.
98. ^ Hampton, Rachele (November 22, 2019), "'She Found Us in the Deserts of Ourselves'", Slate.
99. ^ Di Corpo, Ryan (November 26, 2019), "Author Toni Morrison Honored at Public Memorial", America.
- 100.^ Morrison, Toni (October 5, 1998). "Talk of the Town: Comment". The New Yorker.
- 101.^ Li, Stephanie (2010). Toni Morrison: A Biography. ABC-CLIO. p. 134. ISBN 978-0313378393.
- 102.^ Sachs, Andrea (May 7, 2008). "10 Questions for Toni Morrison". Time. Archived from the original on May 9, 2008.
- 103.^ "Headlines for January 29, 2008 – Sen. Kennedy Compares Barack Obama to JFK". Democracy Now!. January 29, 2008. Retrieved May 30, 2012.
- 104.^ Alexander, Elizabeth (January 28, 2008). "Our first black president?". Salon. Archived from the original on September 13, 2009. Retrieved August 9, 2019. It's worth remembering the context of Toni Morrison's famous phrase about Bill Clinton so we can retire it, now that Barack Obama is a contender
- 105.^ Wood, Gaby (April 19, 2015). "Toni Morrison interview: on racism, her new novel and Marlon Brando". The Daily Telegraph. Retrieved April 22, 2015.
- 106.^ Morrison, Toni (November 21, 2016). "Mourning For Whiteness". The New Yorker. Retrieved April 29, 2017.
- 107.^ Chasmar, Jessica (November 22, 2016). "Toni Morrison: Decline of 'white superiority' scared Americans into electing Donald Trump". The Washington Times. Archived from the original on August 9, 2019. Retrieved May 1, 2017.
- 108.^ a b Jaffrey, Zia (February 3, 1998). "The Salon Interview – Toni Morrison". Salon. Retrieved December 20, 2014.
- 109.^ Kottiswara, W. S. (2008). Postmodern Feminist Writers. New Delhi: Sarup & Sons. pp. 48–86. ISBN 978-8176258210.
- 110.^ "The National Memorial for Peace and Justice", EJI (Equal Justice Initiative).
- 111.^ Kennicott, Philip (April 24, 2018). "A powerful memorial in Montgomery remembers the victims of lynching". The Washington Post. Retrieved August 6, 2019.
- 112.^ a b "Toni Morrison papers to reside at Princeton". Princeton University Office of Communication. October 17, 2014.
- 113.^ Skemer, Don, "Toni Morrison Papers open to students, scholars at Princeton University Library", Princeton University, June 8, 2016.
- 114.^ Branch, Chris (October 23, 2014). "Do Toni Morrison's Papers Belong at Princeton or Howard?". The Huffington Post. Retrieved August 7, 2019.
- 115.^ Bridglal, S. L. (December 15, 2015), "Tea with Toni Morrison", The Observer.
- 116.^ "Videos on Literature and Philosophy: Literature in English, U.S.". Rutgers University Libraries.
- 117.^ Imagine: Toni Morrison Remembers, BBC One, Summer 2015.
- 118.^ Mangan, Lucy (July 15, 2015). "Imagine: Toni Morrison Remembers review – proof of a divine being". The Guardian. Retrieved August 9, 2019.
- 119.^ "Newnhamite director makes BBC programme about Nobel laureate Toni Morrison". Newnham College, University of Cambridge. July 16, 2015. Retrieved August 7, 2019.
- 120.^ "The Foreigner's Home, a Feature-Length Documentary Film on Nobel Laureate Toni Morrison 2017 by Photojournalist Lisa Pacino". Under The Duvet Productions. January 25, 2017. Retrieved April 29, 2017.
- 121.^ "Toni Morrison at the Louvre". The Foreigner's Home. Retrieved February 12, 2020.
- 122.^ Hudak, Brittany M. (November 2019). "Toni Morrison documentary questions what it means to be a foreigner". CAN Journal. Cleveland: Collective Arts Network. Retrieved February 12, 2020.
- 123.^ Fennessy, K. (December 19, 2018). "The Foreigner's Home: Toni Morrison at the Louvre". Video Librarian.
- 124.^ "The Foreigner's Home". Rian Brown. Retrieved April 29, 2017.
- 125.^ "Cinema Studies Faculty Make Documentary on Toni Morrison". News Center. April 21, 2016. Archived from the original on April 21, 2016. Retrieved April 29, 2017.
- 126.^ Schager, Nick (January 29, 2019). "Film Review: 'Toni Morrison: The Pieces I Am'". Variety. Retrieved August 6, 2019.
- 127.^ Kikta, Lorry (April 14, 2019). "Toni Morrison: The Pieces I Am". Film Threat. Retrieved August 6, 2019.

- 128.^ "Ohioana Book Award Winners". Ohioana Library.
- 129.^ "National Book Critics Circle: awards". www.bookcritics.org. Archived from the original on August 1, 2019. Retrieved April 2, 2019.
- 130.^ Goulimari, Pelagia (2012). Toni Morrison. Routledge. p. 26. ISBN 978-1136698682.
- 131.^ "Toni Morrison". Ohio Women's Hall of Fame. Archived from the original on September 24, 2015. Retrieved August 2, 2012.
- 132.^ Goldfarb, Ken (February 13, 1986). "Proctor's Support Wins Governor's Arts Award". The Daily Gazette. Retrieved March 15, 2018.
- 133.^ 8th Annual RFK Book Award Archived December 20, 2014, at the Wayback Machine. Robert F. Kennedy Center.
- 134.^ "Peggy V. Helmerich Distinguished Author Award". helmerichaward.org. Retrieved April 2, 2019.
- 135.^ "American Book Awards". Before Columbus Foundation. Archived from the original on April 7, 2019. Retrieved April 2, 2019.
- 136.^ "Winners by Year". Anisfield-Wolf Book Awards. Retrieved April 2, 2019.
- 137.^ "Frederic G. Melcher Book Award". UUA.org. December 4, 2014. Archived from the original on April 2, 2019. Retrieved April 2, 2019.
- 138.^ "A bench by the road". UU World Magazine. August 11, 2008. Retrieved April 2, 2019.
- 139.^ Lee, Felicia R. (July 28, 2008). "Toni Morrison's on Sullivan's Island: A Bench of Memory at Slavery's Gateway". The New York Times. Retrieved April 2, 2019.
- 140.^ "Almanac" (PDF). April 26, 1988. Archived (PDF) from the original on October 9, 2019. Retrieved August 12, 2019.
- 141.^ Penn University Secretary. "Honorary Degree Recipients". University of Pennsylvania. Retrieved August 12, 2019.
- 142.^ "Honorary Degrees". harvard.edu. Harvard University. Archived from the original on October 15, 2019. Retrieved November 9, 2016. 1989 Benazir Bhutto, Toni Morrison LL.D.
- 143.^ "The Nobel Prize in Literature". NobelPrize.org. Retrieved April 2, 2019.
- 144.^ Fultz, Lucille P. (2003). Toni Morrison: Playing with Difference. University of Illinois Press. p. xiii. ISBN 978-0252028236.
- 145.^ Matus, Jill L. (1998). Toni Morrison. Manchester University Press. p. xiv. ISBN 978-0719044489.
- 146.^ "Toni Morrison to Deliver NEH's 1996 Jefferson Lecture". The Chronicle of Higher Education. February 9, 1996. ISSN 0009-5982. Retrieved April 2, 2019.
- 147.^ "National Book Foundation – DCAL Medal". National Book Foundation. Retrieved April 2, 2019.
- 148.^ "Honorary Degrees – Nobel Conference". Gustavus Adolphus College. Retrieved August 10, 2019.
- 149.^ "1998 Audie Awards". Audio Publishers Association.
- 150.^ "Toni Morrison". National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH). Retrieved April 2, 2019.
- 151.^ Asante, Molefi Kete (2002). 100 Greatest African Americans: A Biographical Encyclopedia. Amherst, New York: Prometheus Books. ISBN 1573929638.
- 152.^ "Golden Plate Awardees of the American Academy of Achievement". www.achievement.org. American Academy of Achievement.
- 153.^ "Summit Overview Photo". 2007. Hal Prince receives the Golden Plate Award from Awards Council member and Nobel laureate Toni Morrison during the American Academy of Achievement's 2007 Banquet of the Golden Plate gala ceremonies in Washington, D.C.;
- 154.^ "Oxford University Gazette, February 10, 2005: University Agenda" Archived June 10, 2011, at the Wayback Machine, University of Oxford, February 2005.
- 155.^ "Toni Morrison". New Jersey Hall of Fame. April 11, 2014. Retrieved April 2, 2019.
- 156.^ "Mailer Prize – The Norman Mailer Center". Archived from the original on August 10, 2018. Retrieved April 2, 2019.
- 157.^ "Toni Morrison reçoit la Légion d'honneur". L'Express (in French). November 3, 2010. Retrieved August 6, 2019.
- 158.^ "Heard on Campus: Nobel Prize-winning novelist Toni Morrison". Penn State Today. April 11, 2010. Archived from the original on August 7, 2019. Retrieved August 7, 2019.
- 159.^ "Library of Congress Prize for American Fiction Awarded to Don DeLillo". Library of Congress. Retrieved August 6, 2019.

- 160.^ "Nobel Laureate Toni Morrison to Speak, Receive Honorary Degree at Rutgers' 245th Commencement May 15". Rutgers Today. February 8, 2011. Retrieved August 6, 2019.
- 161.^ "Dies Academicus 2011" Archived October 15, 2011, at the Wayback Machine, Service de communication, Université de Genève, October 2011.
- 162.^ Toni Morrison's "Intervention" Archived March 4, 2016, at the Wayback Machine, Dies Academicus 2011, Université de Genève, October 14, 2011.
- 163.^ Clark, Lesley (May 29, 2012). "Obama awards medals to Bob Dylan, Toni Morrison, others". McClatchy Newspapers. Retrieved September 28, 2017.
- 164.^ Patterson, Jim (May 9, 2013). "Novelist Morrison tells grads to embrace interconnectedness". Vanderbilt News.
- 165.^ Dienst, Karin (June 4, 2013). "Princeton awards six honorary degrees". Princeton University news.
- 166.^ Fancher, Lou (December 24, 2013), "2013 PEN Oakland winners announced", The Mercury News.
- 167.^ "Q&A with Robert McCracken Peck: For the Love of Art and History", Drexel Now, Drexel University, May 7, 2013.
- 168.^ "National Book Critics Circle Announces Finalists for Publishing Year 2014". National Book Critics Circle. January 19, 2015. Retrieved January 29, 2015.
- 169.^ Dove, Rita, "Sandrof Award: Rita Dove's Homage to Toni Morrison", National Book Critics Circle, March 15, 2015. Retrieved May 10, 2019.
- 170.^ Galehouse, Maggie (March 1, 2016). "PEN Literary Award winners announced". Houston Chronicle. Retrieved March 2, 2016.
- 171.^ "2016 PEN Literary Award Winners". PEN. March 1, 2016. Retrieved March 2, 2016.
- 172.^ "Norton Lectures". Harvard.edu. Harvard University. Archived from the original on November 2, 2016. Retrieved November 9, 2016. Harvard's preeminent lecture series in the arts and humanities, the Norton Lectures recognize individuals of extraordinary talent who, in addition to their particular expertise, have the gift of wide dissemination and wise expression. The term "poetry" is interpreted in the broadest sense to encompass all poetic expression in language, music, or the fine arts. Past Norton Professors have included T.S. Eliot, Jorge Luis Borges, Leonard Bernstein, Czeslaw Milosz, John Cage, and Nadine Gordimer. The Norton Professor in 2016 is Toni Morrison
- 173.^ "Toni Morrison wins MacDowell medal for lifetime achievement". The Boston Globe. Associated Press. April 8, 2016. Retrieved December 27, 2017.
- 174.^ "2018 Jefferson Medal". American Philosophical Society. Retrieved April 6, 2019.
- 175.^ "Toni Morrison – National Women's Hall of Fame".
- 176.^ "National Women's Hall of Fame Virtual Induction Series Inaugural Event December 10, 2020" (PDF).
- 177.^ "National Women's Hall of Fame Virtual Induction Series Inaugural Event December 10, 2020" (PDF). November 11, 2020. Archived (PDF) from the original on October 9, 2019. Retrieved November 12, 2020.
- 178.^ "Gov. Signs Bill To Honor Toni Morrison's Legacy".
- 179.^ Polsal, Anthony (April 22, 2020). "Myles Garrett expresses 'love of Cleveland' by unveiling downtown mural". Cleveland Browns. Retrieved July 31, 2020.
- 180.^ "U.S. Postal Service Reveals Stamps for 2018". United States Postal Service. October 24, 2019. Retrieved October 26, 2019.
- 181.^ "The Complete List of Grammy Nominees". The New York Times. December 6, 2007. Retrieved August 6, 2019.
- 182.^ Frazier, Charise (September 4, 2019), "Toni Morrison's Hometown Declares Author's Birthday As 'Toni Morrison Day'", MadameNoire.
- 183.^ Joseph, Soraya (September 6, 2019), "Toni Morrison's birthday recognized as 'Toni Morrison Day' in her hometown", TheGrio.
- 184.^ Woytach, Carissa (January 30, 2020), "Bill designating state-wide Toni Morrison Day moves forward", The Chronicle-Telegram.
- 185.^ 'Toni Morrison Day' closer to reality in Ohio, bill now awaiting DeWine's approval, Fox8, December 2, 2020.
- 186.^ Joy, Jordana (December 21, 2020). "DeWine signs Toni Morrison Day bill". The Morning Journal.
- 187.^ "3221-Toni Morrison Hall Facility Information". Cornell University Facilities. Cornell University. Retrieved July 15, 2018.

- 188.^ Wilensky, Joe. "On North Campus, New Buildings Shape Future of Undergrad Community". Cornellians. Cornell University. Retrieved July 15, 2018.
- 189.^ Benjamin, Shanna Greene (May 14, 2013). "The Space that Race Creates: An Interstitial Analysis of Toni Morrison's 'Recitatif'". Studies in American Fiction. 40 (1): 87–106. doi:10.1353/saf.2013.0004. ISSN 2158-5806. S2CID 162497875.
- 190.^ Smith, Zadie (January 23, 2019). "The Genius of Toni Morrison's Only Short Story". The New Yorker. Retrieved February 24, 2019.
- 191.^ Jeffers, Honorée Fanonne (January 28, 2019). "Toni Morrison's Only Short Story Addresses Race by Avoiding Race". The New York Times.
- 192.^ O'Keeffe, Alice. "Preview | Recitatif". The Bookseller. Retrieved February 24, 2019.
- 193.^ Lawson, Carol (July 23, 1982). "BROADWAY; Book and lyrics of new musical by Toni Morrison". The New York Times. ISSN 0362-4331. Retrieved February 15, 2019.
- 194.^ "Wiener Festwochen: Desdemona". Festwochen.at. May 2011. Archived from the original on March 18, 2012. Retrieved May 30, 2012.
- 195.^ Thiessen, Erin Russell (May 26, 2011). "Toni Morrison's Desdemona delivers a haunting, powerful 'remembering'". Expatica – via Neo-Griot.
- 196.^ Winn, Steven (October 20, 2011). "Toni Morrison adds twist to 'Desdemona'". SF Gate. Retrieved October 21, 2011.
- 197.^ Li, Stephanie (Summer 2011). "Five Poems: The Gospel According to Toni Morrison". Callaloo. 34 (3): 899–914. doi:10.1353/cal.2011.0173. ISSN 1080-6512. S2CID 162544646.
- 198.^ "Five Poems by Toni Morrison". The Believer. August 6, 2019. Retrieved January 26, 2020.
- 199.^ Morrison, Toni (2007). Playing in the Dark: Whiteness and the Literary Imagination. Knopf Doubleday Publishing Group. ISBN 978-0307388636.